Pleasure Sail Ends in Death

yards to shore. Robertson was unable to swim the distance. Ironically, the mast of the sloop remained above water after the vessel sank and the men could have clung to it in safety. (CP photo.)

Major Policy Address Planned by Dulles

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will make a "major policy address" at the United Nations this morning covering Korea, Indo-China, Germany, Austria and disarmament.

A spokesman for the United States UN delegation said Dulles' speech, leading off the General Assembly's first round debate, would constitute the "first comprehensive statement" by President Eisenhower's administration of the world situation as it concerns the world organization.

The 16 United Nations allies of the Korean war decided at a closed meeting Wednesday to stand firm on the UN decision to limit the Korean peace conference to belligerents.

At Stockholm, the Swedish government Wednesday night announced it has relayed a reply from Red China to the United States on the time and place for the Korean peace conference, but said it "added nothing new to the situation."

SHORT-IN LENGTH

A foreign office spokesman said the reply arrived at Stockholm from Peking Tuesday and was forwarded immediately to the U.S. embassy in Stockholm.

"The reply," the spokesman said, "was very short and contained nothing but a reference to a reply the Chinese sent directly to United Nations Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in New York earlier this week."

The message sent by Communist China's premier and foreign minister, Chou En-lai, to Hammarskjold suggested that the time and place of the conference be decided only after the UN has considered its demand that neutrals be invited to the conference to make it a "round-table" affair.

In London it was reported that Britain may move to bring the United Nations and Communist sides together soon to straighten out snarls over the shape of the Korean peace conference.

Informants said Wednesday night after a meeting of Prime Minister Churchill's cabinet that Britain will, however, oppose any reopening of the Korean debate in the UN General Assembly.

BROADER MEMBERSHIP

Red China and North Korea have both suggested to the UN that membership of the peace conference be broadened to take in some neutral Asian nations.

Nevertheless, one idea favored here is that direct contact should be established between the two sides to insure that peace talks begin by October 28, the deadline set in the armistice agreement. This could be done, the informants said, by appointing a committee of interested powers or by appointing a mediator.

There was no way of knowing whether this move was considered by the cabinet, over which Churchill presided. It is likely to be discussed by British and United States representatives in New York if it has not already come up.

Posts Offered With Holes

EAST ST. LOUIS (AP)—The new telephone directory here carries an advertisement announcing the Sutherland Lumber Co. has for sale "creosoted fence posts and holes."

Not so, an official of the firm explained Wednesday. It was a typographical error. The items featured by the firm are creosoted fence posts and poles.

CAPETOWN (Reuters)—South Africa's Nationalist government failed to get parliamentary approval Wednesday for a bill providing for segregation of colored mixed blood voters on a separate electoral roll.

The measure, supported 122 to 78, was 16 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed.

Premier Daniel Malan told the joint session of parliament he will try "another course" if his proposal was beaten.

The bill was designed to validate an earlier measure thrown out of the courts. Passage would have meant elimination of Cape Province's colored voters from the common electoral roll.

Both men devoted much of their speeches to the problems of their own ridings. In some spots it was difficult to tell exactly when they had stopped acting as government spokesmen and begun voicing their own personal hopes and beliefs.

SINGLE PARAGRAPH

Mr. Wright, for instance, in his single paragraph on the Elections Act, said it would be agreed that the province's alternative balloting experiment "has not been entirely successful." But he didn't say the system would be scrapped. He and the other members were.

The debate was opened, following tradition by two Social Credit backbenchers, Percy Wright of Victoria and Ray Williston of Fort George. Normally the first two speakers in this debate would expand government policy, filling in details on the bare announcement of proposed legislation contained in the previous day's throne speech.

Both men avoided the question of their own ridings. In some spots it was difficult to tell exactly when they had stopped acting as government spokesmen and begun voicing their own personal hopes and beliefs.

"I think he helped Marlowe to flee under cover of the murder," Hoffman said. "I found out that Marlowe was known to have been in Douai in northern France three months after his alleged murder. I believe he also went to Italy, and fled the country after being condemned to die at the stake for heresy."

The tomb is that of Sir Thomas Walsingham, Marlowe's servant who continued to write, sending his plays to Walsingham, who had them copied and produced under a false name.

Hoffman claims Walsingham paid Shakespeare to father Marlowe's works when Shakespeare was "just a third-rate actor."

"The money would account for Shakespeare—about whose playwriting or acting nothing was heard until after the supposed death of Marlowe—being able to buy his famous 'new place' at Stratford-on-Avon only three years after coming into prominence," Hoffman said.

MLA Wright Demands West Road

Roundabout Cure, Gorge Work Asked

Vancouver Island has played its "one-string fiddle" long enough, Percy Wright (SC-Victoria) Wednesday told the legislature. "If a West Coast road would give us harmony, then let's have it," he said.

Mr. Wright, who led off the Throne speech debate, took time after a discussion of government policy to detail a few of the problems of his own highway.

He called for immediate consideration of a west coast road, asked the government to help the city cure traffic congestion at the Fountain Circle, asked for a capital city grant.

He suggested some might be done to allow city council to permit a tea garden in Beacon Hill Park and urged the provincial government to protest to federal government this year's change in the official date for celebration of Victoria Day.

AFFORD NOT TO?

Speaking on the west coast road, Mr. Wright said the question was not "Can we afford it?" but rather "Can we afford not to have it?"

The new road would encourage tourists to spend an extra day or two on the Island, he thought. "Having traversed our highway it is little wonder that the tourists decide to leave on the nearest ferry to Nanaimo, rather than return to Victoria."

The ultimate, he said, would be a belt road through the Bernards and down the west coast.

Mr. Wright said the proposed ribbon

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

HENS have hit the headlines in widely separated parts of the world.

Mohammed Mossadegh, staging a brief hunger strike for better food in Tehran, said he had to have his chickens every day to keep up his strength. The tearful ex-premier of Iran told the jailer that he also needed "a robust soup, a cutlet and a good dessert."

He won the hunger strike, and is presumably getting his three chickens a day. This seems rich fare in a country where many people are living on a few grains of cereal and the smell of an oiled rag.

In Victoria, a big Canadian poultry man said it was not cruel to keep hens in small cages under artificial light to make them lay more eggs. He did not say whether it was cruel to keep Mossadegh in a cage, but then nobody asked him to voice an opinion on that point.

S. J. Sanders, president of the Canadian Federation of Hatchery Associations gathered in convention here, defended the "battery hen system," which means keeping hens in small-wire cages, under artificial light for more than 13 hours a day, with nothing to do but eat, drink and lay eggs.

Some SPCA members attacked the system as cruel, but Mr. Sanders said battery hens are probably happier than those that run loose. "A hen is interested in very little other than eating and drinking," he remarked.

Certain likenesses exist between Mossadegh and a battery hen. The Persian sage has done a lot of cackling in recent years, and he certainly laid an egg with his oil-nationalization program. Both the ex-premier and the sage are on the inside looking out.

There the resemblance seems to end. The imprisoned hen continues to serve society, but Mossadegh does not. Of course, this may be a trifle early to tell. Research may show that statesmen do their best work while confined in cages, away from distracting influences. After a settling-down period, they may begin to lay plans like champions.

However, I doubt the value of the "battery statesman system." Some writers—John Bunyan for instance—have done good work in prison. Writers deal with ideas. Statesmen probably would not have such success, at least until they were turned loose. Statesmen deal with events, and it is difficult to control events through a wall.

People are not hens. Statesmen and workers alike resent being clapped in prison—whether it is a material prison or a prison of the spirit such as a dictatorship imposes. Most people prefer to scratch around for what they can find in the yard rather than enjoy a varied diet in the cage.

Nations do not thrive in cages either. Many a nationalist has managed to shut his country in a cell, away from other countries, only to learn that no one was ready to fill the food-dish.

Many Requesting Homes for Pets

By B. ROBERT MAGGS

I am receiving a lot of requests for various breeds of dogs. That is, people are writing to inquire if I know of anyone wishing to get a good home for a pet that they can no longer keep. While I have no desire to go into the dog business, I am very willing to act regarding the mother cat or dog who has been turned loose. I have found that the mother animal has been bothered by human beings too much during or right after delivery of her babies.

Animals in their wild habitat have been known to eat their young but statistics as accurate as such statistics can be seem to prove that it happens mostly with the domesticated animals.

See that the expectant mother has a nice quiet place away from the goings and comings of people. Do not handle the young. Keep strangers away from her "nest," especially children. With an animal that has a known tendency to eat her young it is advisable for someone to be present at the time of delivery, but do not interfere with the domesticated animals.

A lady called me last week and told me that her dog was lost—a valuable dog (as they all aren't valuable) and asked me to let my readers know. I explained that by the time Thursday rolled around and my column appeared the dog would probably have turned up. I advised her to place ad and found the Colonist under dogs for sale will bring results.

HOPELESS THOUGHT

What I wanted to point out there, is that it is pretty hopeless to expect to find your pet through this column because it only comes once a week, and if you advertise in the want ad column, you will get much better results. If you write regarding a pet, I will do my best to help you. Include your phone number when possible.

Mr. G. S. W. is going to buy a Budgie bird, and wants to know how to go about selecting one.

A first of all buy it from a reputable pet shop or dealer, that is, bird breeder. Otherwise, you are liable to get a bird of inferior breed, or one not in first class condition. The color of the bird is, of course, a matter of personal preference. To go into the details of how to tell a good bird from a bad one, or a sick bird from a healthy one, would only confuse you, unless he is very obviously ill, sitting with feathers bunched oruffed out, and looking generally

Flaming Death Grim Fate of 28

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — An American Airlines twin-engine Convair carried 28 persons to flaming death Wednesday when it sliced into two radio towers and crashed in a cornfield after circling Albany airfield for an hour waiting for fog to lift.

All the 25 passengers and 10 crew members killed when the Boston-to-Chicago plane (flight 723) plummeted to earth and burned only three miles short of a landing.

Witnesses said one engine was burning and backfiring as the plane skinned trees and wavered over a heavily populated area before hitting a 365-foot radio station transmitting tower. It narrowly missed a trailer camp, containing 64 trailers and a motel. One trailer was scorched.

H. E. Boyd, Jr., commissioner of the Schenectady County aviation department, examined one of the plane's propellers and said one engine apparently had not been functioning properly.

Airline officials denied there had been any engine trouble and said the plane would have landed safely if it had not hit the towers.

A three-way investigation was launched immediately by federal, state and local authorities.

Railway Men Gather To Discuss Demands

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's railway men got together Wednesday to work out their demands for the coming year.

Spokesmen for some 15 international unions representing the non-operating staffs of four Canadian railways met in private to discuss details of a new contract to be negotiated shortly between the employees and the railways.

The present contract, covering some 144,000 men in sheds, repair shops, stations and clerical jobs, expires December 1. Notice of intention to seek a new agreement must be filed by October 1.

The railways concerned are the Canadian Pacific; Canadian National; Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo, and Ontario Northland.

Frank H. Hall, chairman of the unions' general conference committee said between meetings that he thought it was too early to make any statement about the committee's discussions.

Lengthy 'Drunk' Ends

LONDON (AP) — Air ministry released on Tuesday a British airman whose disappearance in the Suez Canal zone in July led to a near crisis between London and Cairo. Apparently it all started because the airman got drunk in Ismailia.

An air ministry statement said the Egyptians held the airman for a month in Cairo after he got drunk in Ismailia and missed the bus back to his unit. The statement said Egyptian military authorities interrogated him, locked him up and then, on August 8, put him on a ship to France.

Gold Strikes Predicted As District Catastrophe

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Municipal leaders throughout the Porcupine gold-mining area of the big Timmins district said Wednesday that extended gold strikes would be a catastrophe to the 50,000 people in the district.

They were commenting on a statement by William MacLennan, assistant Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), that

"We've just been talking things over so far," he said.

In an earlier statement, Mr. Hall explained the meeting was called "to see whether collective action can be had on materials which can be considered as affecting all classes of railway workers identified with the general conference committee."

Dr. James B. Clinton, president of the Porcupine Chamber of Commerce, urged federal and provincial authorities to arrange negotiations "to forestall this disaster."

Ottawa Faces Decisions On Two Ticklish Issues

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet, in its third post-election meeting, faces decisions today on two politically-ticklish transportation problems.

Prime Minister St. Laurent has announced that the cabinet will review the bid by eight provinces — all except Quebec and Ontario — to nullify a freight-rate increase granted a year ago by the Canadian railways last March.

He also has said the cabinet will consider the application of Canadian Pacific Airlines to break the monopoly on east-west air cargo held by Trans-Canada Air Lines.

It is understood the cabinet has decided tentatively to reject the provinces' plea against the $38,500,000-a-year freight rate boost. But such a decision might be a difficult political step.

SOME RELUCTANCE

The government likely would find some reluctance among its supporters outside Quebec and Ontario to go along with rejection of the provinces' bid. Strong opposition to past freight-rate increases has come from both the West and the Maritime Provinces.

The question uppermost in the mind of the government may be: Can the plea of the provincial governments be rejected without further alienating the West?

Envoy's Family Vanishes

GENEVA (AP) — The wife and three children of missing British diplomat Donald Maclean have disappeared mysteriously from their home here. Police think they may be behind the Iron Curtain.

A telegram purporting to have been filed from Terriet, Switzerland, early Wednesday by Mrs. Melinda Maclean, 27, said "Safe and well... don't worry." It was addressed to her mother, Mrs. Melinda Dunbar.

Swiss security police said the original message, hand-written, was being brought to Geneva for examination by Mrs. Dunbar and handwriting experts to determine whether the writing is that of Mrs. Maclean. They declined to disclose the full text.

Terriet, 60 miles east of Geneva, is a suburb of Montrœux, where the family was reported to have headed last Friday to visit friends.

NOT FRUITFUL

Telegrams have not proved fruitful clues in the past in the international police case set off by Maclean and a fellow diplomat, Guy Burgess, when they dropped out of sight in France in May, 1951.

There was a message from Paris to Mrs. Maclean in London a few days after the disappearance of Maclean, then 38, a foreign office expert on American affairs who sat in on the U.S.-British-Canadian committee that handled political aspects of the atom bomb.

"Had to leave unexpectedly," it said. "Sorry, darling, I love you. Please do not stop loving me."

And a message received from Rome by Burgess' mother said:

"Terribly sorry for my silence. Am embarking on a long Mediterranean holiday. Do forgive, Guy."

Neither led to any break in the case.

Added Power Held Possible for Molotov

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

Thomas Whitney, who interests himself in Soviet affairs in this Dispatch from London, was a member of the Associated Press staff in Moscow until recently.

BY THOMAS WHITNEY

LONDON (AP) — Anastase I. Mikoyan, little Armenian who for years has been trade commissioner of the Soviet Union, has apparently been eased out of his control over Soviet foreign commerce in the latest Soviet government reorganization anounced Tuesday.

This could mean that powerful Foreign Minister Vyacheslav

Molotov now will have more influence over Soviet foreign trade policies.

Mikoyan, who was a member of Stalin's politburo while it existed, remains a deputy premier of the U.S.S.R. and minister of domestic trade.

But the new minister of for-ign trade is Ivan Kabanov, Kabanov, who has not been associated with Mikoyan, and he is new to the foreign trade field.

Kabanov is a business executive who formerly headed the ministry of the electric-industry. Later he took over the organization called Gosmos, which was in charge of priorities in allocation of all scarce industrial materials in the U.S.S.R.

Mikoyan has run Soviet for-ign trade — even in relatively short periods when he did not formally have the title of minister of foreign trade — ever since the 1920s.

There were never any outward signs of disagreement between him and Molotov. But in the opinion of foreign observers in Moscow, Molotov has been extending his authority and influence ever since Stalin's death.

The Throne Speech

A PART from Premier Bennett's surprise packet for the working women and girls of the province, in the shape of a promise of "measures to ensure fair remuneration to female employees," the items of legislation mentioned in the Throne Speech are in the main matters left over from the uncompleted spring session. There is, of course, one notable exception: the proposal to levy a new tax on industries using natural resources, of which earlier public notice had been given. As is the custom, the Speech studiously avoided specifying anything beyond the general nature of the government's proposals. For the details one must wait until the implementing bills are introduced.

The reference to the wages of female employees has been interpreted as meaning an "equal pay" act similar to those in force in Ontario and Saskatchewan, which could have a far-reaching effect on the payrolls of this province, where the proportion of women working for a living is high. There are numerous examples of women doing the same kind of work as men and doing it every bit as well (the teaching profession is a good illustration), so that with the doctrine of equal pay there will be many in agreement. While the principle may seem fair, however, the application of it is not always as simple as it might appear. The factors of comparative work capacity and quantity of production need to be taken into account in many fields of employment. There are several sides to this question, and the details of the government's proposals will be awaited with much interest.

In the financial part of the government's program for the session there is a curious feature. It will be recalled that the Social Credit party campaigned for election on a pledge of economy—cut out extravagance, lighten the tax load. Since British Columbia's revenue from existing taxes is increasing year-by-year, one may well ask why an economy-minded government should find it necessary to impose a new tax—and that on industries which already are finding it difficult to compete in world markets. Other proposed minor changes in the tax structure of the province, broadening exemptions from sales tax on meals and lowering the motor vehicle license fee, would reduce the government's income, but the total of that shrinkage would be small in comparison with the extra revenue to come from the new tax.

What does the government propose to do with this additional money? The Throne Speech, of course, does not say; and the public may have to wait until next year for the complete answer, since the government intends to finance the balance of this fiscal year by way of a further supply bill. This means that there will be no regular budget, and presumably none of the itemized accounting which an annual budget must contain.

Victoria Knew Them Well

MANY Victoria memories would be stirred last week through reading accounts of the presentation at Calgary of new regimental colors to be PPCLI by its honorary colonel, the Lady Patricia Ramsay. Up until the outbreak of the last war the Princess Pals, as they were formerly known, were part of the military life of this city. Work Point Barracks housed half the regiment in the decades between the world wars, and many local war veterans recall with customary fond recollection their service with this famous Canadian formation.

The Patricias, as current serving members prefer to be known, have a history unique in the Canadian Army list. They were raised in 1914 by private endeavor after the style of older days, through the patriotic action of Colonel Hamilton Gault and considerably at his own expense. In honor of the Princess Patricia, daughter of the then governor-general, the Duke of Connaught, the lady who came specially to Canada to present the new colors last week, they adopted the name they were later to make famous. So well did they perform in the First World War that the unit was retained as a regular army regiment, and their subsequent splendid record in both the Second World War and the Korean campaign reflect the prizéd traditions already part of the military lore of this nation.

This city was the loser when the regimental depot was transferred to Alberta, but memory is tenacious and the PPCLI, which through numerous serving members is still linked closely to Victoria, is a name that invokes a keen interest here whenever it is mentioned. Without prejudice to other fine units of the active Canadian Army no regiment carries greater lustre than that which not so long ago this community knew so well.

The Reverse Is More Likely

ONE must take with a grain of salt the news report which says Sir Winston Churchill is personally preparing his own obituary on what is termed, "a large scale." The British prime minister is almost 79 years of age and his further life expectancy cannot therefore be too lengthy, but we fancy he has no thought of dying; he has too many things he wants to do first. His is not the moribund temperament that builds its own mausoleum.

Nor has he the self-conceit that such a news item would imply. He is one of the great men of the world and undoubtedly he is aware of that fact. He is also unique in his sense of history and has every reason to appreciate that his place therein is well assured by the milestones of his illustrious career, but he is not a vain man. His sense of humor and known magnanimity alone belie any such cheap assessment.

There is one thing more. Even an obituary written by the Churchillian pen is unnecessary. There is not a competent journal anywhere that does not have in its files sufficient data to do ample justice to this great Englishman. His life has been practically an open book. As a wise man in view of his age he may be putting his personal papers in order but that, surely, is all. It is much more in character for the irrepressible Churchill to be drafting not an obituary but further measures that reflect his all-consuming concern with the living.

MILK PRICES

Sir—Safeway Stores and the Bennett government appear to desire milk decontrol because it will mean cheaper milk for the public, better quality and more efficient distributing methods. Commendable aims, if they are the only ones.

But there is some doubt these aims will be realized. A previous government and the oil companies made similar promises in the case of gas and fuel oil, just relax control and naturally competition will force down the price. It was to be, oh, so simple! Well, of course, all know what happened. The price of gas and oil has gone up ever since. The competition seems to have been cast aside for co-operation among the oil men to raise prices.

To avoid the price of milk sharply rising later on, a maximum price could be set at, say, today's price, and a minimum quality set also. Doing this should please everyone if Safeway and Mr. Bennett mean what they say.

The distributors and the government should not mind because they claim decontrol will mean lower prices anyway. The farmers would be in favor as they are to be guaranteed and rightly so, a minimum price. The consumers would be protected against any large price increase such as in the case of gas and oil. Here is a chance for the Bennett regime to try out its theory and to protect the people at the same time. But will they do it?

POWELL RIVER PLEA

Sir—The Powell River district is now completely without any means of transportation to Vancouver or Vancouver Island for motor cars, and unless you travel by plane you have only one boat a week provided by the CPR for ordinary passenger service.

Such indifference to the requirements of the taxpayers is paving the way for a socialist government, and from the experience of other countries we do not want to follow their example.

ANCIENT U.S. CURRENCY

Sir—I noticed an article in the Calgary Herald where a Victor Jones of your city was endeavoring to find the value of a U.S. paper dime.

We own a U.S. paper 3c and 5c of the same vintage, March 3, 1863, marked fractional currency, and have been trying, to no avail, to find their worth. Would sincerely appreciate being able to contact the said Victor Jones, perchance his quest has been more fruitful than ours.

We also possess a half-guinea note with an inverted crown imprinted on one side and with the year 1775 on the face.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

A COMMONPLACE question among men is: "What razor blades do you use?" The inference may be drawn that men are vaguely dissatisfied with their blades. There is a good deal of friendly exchange of blades in Pullman washrooms, hotels and other places where men shave in company. The average man does quite a bit of shopping around in blades, trying this one and that one, as evident in the variety of blades for sale, and the lively advertising of them.

Modern man puts everything up to the blade. He slaps on a little new-fangled cream of some sort, brushes or to be brushed, and then immediately goes to work with the blade, expecting the worst. If he would only remember his father, or his father's father, and the great days of the barbershop when half the men in the world, if not more, never dreamed of shaving themselves but went to the barber shop every day, the modern shaver would understand what a good shave consisted of.

It consisted, first of all, of reclining back in a great chair far more comfortable and flexible than a dentist's chair. Next, after a few cheery words from the barber, a hot wet towel wrapped around his chin, neck and cheeks, with a tiny peep-hole left in the towel for the patient's nose.

Hot and stinging, the moist towel clung to the face, wilting every whisker. You could feel the stubble melting. Off whisked the towel, and another, hotter, moister than the first was deftly slapped around chin, neck and cheeks again. Tingling, you listened, for your eyes were also covered by the towel, to the barber preparing the lather mug. You could hear him walk over to the tap, run it generously, to get the water really hot.

Off came the towel; and there stood the barber, mug and brush in hand, whipping up a good, rich lather with a boiling hot brush. This he lathered richly all over your chin, neck, cheeks, finally rubbing it into your stubble with fingertips. Surely no whisker could resist a blade now.

The same ideas are published, in perhaps more polished form, in the Chicago Tribune and other mouthpieces of American isolationism. They have their roots in American anglophobia going back to 1775, in the American superiority complex, and in American shock when United States arms failed to win a clear-cut victory in Korea.

This school of thought needed a scapegoat to explain why the Americans didn't go in there and knock the hell out of the Communists. President Truman was one scapegoat after he ousted General MacArthur and limited hostilities to the Korean peninsula. Now other handy scapegoats are the British, the Indians, and perhaps to some extent the Canadians—vide Welzel: the British "loused us up in Korea".

This letter explains more graphically than a pundit's article why Washington's leadership of the free world is erratic at times—for the school of American opinion to which Mr. Welzel adheres represents a sizeable number of votes.

However, it isn't the majority opinion in the United States. While Pearson himself gets many letters like this—which he always answers with at least seeming equanimity—he also gets many which in effect say "Thank God for you Canadians and British, and for your efforts to keep Washington on the beam".

At the moment, the monks are still taking the dogs for long walks across rocks and snow. But the decree has gone forth. The last nip of brandy or wine has been sipped and "finis" must be written at the end of a long story.

It is much shorter than some of its more imaginative followers have believed. St. Bernard of Menthon, who died in 1008, undoubtedly founded a monastery and hospice at the highest point of the Great St. Bernard Pass, 4,000 feet above sea level, and a few years later, another hospice lower down on the Little St. Bernard Pass. Avalanches and snow drifts 40 feet high made his enterprise a boon to travelers for centuries. If he is otherwise less famous than St. Bernard of Clairvaux, who died in 1153, he had the advantage in his dogs.

But when they were first bred seems wrapped in mystery. Visitors to the hospice as late as the 18th century largely overlooked them. But, early in the 19th century, they were seen in pairs, one said to have a cask of wine and a container of bread round his neck and the other carrying a bundle of clothing.

Their first representative visited England in 1802. Thereafter, they won all hearts. No dog that Landseer painted—and not even his lions—were more in the public eye of more loved for a combination of strength and benevolence. So high did they rise in popular esteem that a reverend father was able to engage Mr. Gladstone in theological discussion on whether they had been brought into the world specifically for the purpose of saving lives.

The St. Bernards, judging by the colored picture that once ornamented every well-conducted nursery, fully earned their popularity. Some of them, so the children were told, suffered martyrdom worthy of Goliath. One, being mistaken for a wolf by a man he was digging out of the snow, was shot dead. But before that sad fate befell him he had unearthed, licked back to warmth, and brought stimulating refreshment to stranded wayfarers whose numbers are given at the lowest as 29 and at the most impressive 75.

Strikes and Violence

(From The Toronto Globe and Mail)

VIOLENCE used to be the last resort of unions in a strike. Now it is the first. The Toronto milk drivers' walkout was only hours old when non-strikers were being attacked and their loads dumped. Several dairies not involved in the strike were forced to take their men off the road. Others could only deliver with police escorts. All this on the first day of a strike.

How long can this go on? For months now, strikers of one sort or another have been kicking the law around to suit themselves. Scarcely a part of Ontario has escaped mob rule. How much more of it must there be before the Labor Relations Act does what in the end will have to be done?

If the board has the slightest vestige of responsibility, it will lay down the law to the unions of this province. It will tell them that from now on they are to be held strictly accountable for their actions. Those which respect the law will retain the rights and privileges granted them by the board; those which do not will lose them.

If the board lacks the moral courage to act responsibly itself, and insists that trade unions show responsibility, then the legislature must step in. It can redraw the Labor Relations Act and provide the teeth which will end the violence and intimidation we have witnessed over the last few weeks.

The people of this province will not tolerate a double standard of law—one for the unions, and one for everybody else. They believe the law should be the same for all, and that all should respect it. Premier Frost tried to bring this home to the unions in a most reasonable manner by his July 31 statement. Evidently, he did not succeed. It is now up to the Labor Relations Board to do so—and failing it, the legislature.

Right here in Victoria there are families who will be unable to celebrate Christmas in the traditional manner were it not for the assistance provided by the Christmas Bureau.

Remembering that the day which falls on December 25 should be one of universal happiness, the organizers of the Christmas Bureau assume the duty and it is a happy one of supplying a little Christmas cheer to those in need. A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

The Sons of Freedom appear to be getting out of their own clothes and getting underneath everybody else's skin. And, to a certain extent, we can lay the blame at the door of the famous Russian author — Leo Tolstoy.

When Tsar Nicholas II came to the throne of Russia in 1895, the Cossacks began to make the persecutions of the Doukhobor peasantries one of their chief extra-curricular sports.

Count Tolstoy and his friends, to sympathize with the plunders, insults, and maltreatment directed against these people, began to take up their cause with the emperor and his court at St. Petersburg.

As the result of this pleading, in March, 1898, the emperor gave permission for the Doukhobors to leave the country, and Tolstoy and his companions, aided by the Society of Friends in England, set about devising a master plan of emigration. To raise the funds for this enterprise, he devoted the proceeds from the sale of his new novel, "Resurrection," to this project, and enough money came into the coffers to send a first group, in the summer of 1898, to the British island of Cyprus.

In January of the following year, the second group, numbering over 1,000, reached Canada. Later on these numbers were swelled by the emigrants from Cyprus and Caucasus, so that in 1899, 7,500 Doukhobors found asylum in Canada's far west.

In April 1901, the Hon. David Mills, QC, minister of justice and attorney general in the Laurier administration, said in the House of Commons that "not a single offense had been committed by the Doukhobors; they were law abiding, and if good conduct was a recommendation, they were good immigrants." The large fleets of land demanded population, and by the demand given to crime, the conclusion was that they would make good citizens.

In September, 1903, "What would be the verdict of the minister of justice for Canada and the attorney general for British Columbia?"

As an ordinary citizen, I find myself plagued by the excesses of these so-called "Sons of Freedom." To my mind, "Sons of Anarchy" would be a more suitable designation.

"But I try to remind myself that the few do not represent the many, and that the Doukhobors as well as the provinces have contributed much towards the present impasse."

When the Doukhobors, or "Spirit Wrestlers" first came to Canada, they were received with open arms. They came as "citizens of the world" and the federal government of the day did not press the necessity of Canadian citizenship as the price for purchasing freedom in a free land.

They were also promised freedom from military service for a period of 99 years. That undertaking has still 43 years to run. What federal government in Canada could foresee in 1899 that by the end of 1945 Canada would have been embroiled in two great world wars?

But all this is beside the point. Canada's laws are not the laws which never are amenable to change. New times demand new laws, and

Wicks Plans To Group All Offices

Labor department offices, now scattered in various government buildings in the city, will be consolidated in one building as soon as possible, Labor Minister Lyle Wicks declared Wednesday night.

Trades and Labor Council (AFL-TLC), the minister said such a step had been taken in Vancouver and that it had helped speed the work of processing applications by unions for certification as bargaining authority.

IMPROVEMENT MOVES

The moves are those aimed at improving administration, he said, not a policy of "shooting in the dark" by a new government.

The minister said he was agreeably impressed by work the labor council is doing through its correspondence.

A marked lack of labor strikes this year in comparison with last year at the same time is a sign that organized labor is making a sincere effort to create settlements, and that new government routines are aiding the labor peace, Mr. Wicks said.

INDIRECT REFERENCE

Only passing, indirect reference was made to a recent round table conference called by him and attended by four union delegates.

TLC and CCL unions declined to attend because their provincial bodies were not invited and because what they termed Communist leaders were invited. Three of four attending are branded Communists by the TLC and CCL groups.

"My views are well known to Local 101 of the Amalgamated Street, Electric and Motor Coach Employees, (TLC) on foreign ideologies in Canada. I bear no sympathy for them," Mr. Wicks declared.

The minister holds membership in the local, being an active member prior to his election.

Concerning his department's work, five minimum wage orders have been revised and others are being actively studied, he said. "There seems to be developing a slip in the economy and caution should be used in revising the orders," he said.

The Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act will be brought before the session in February, and it is hoped that the Workmen's Compensation Act may be brought forward at the same time, he continued.

SURVEY CONTINUING

An actuarial survey of the WCB funds is continuing with a final objective of whether funds can be invested at better earning capacity to take care of some urgent cases. Silicosis and arthritis appear to be near the top of the list of diseases which require more attention. Low pensions also may be boosted if the survey is favorable, he said.

Good Year Predicted In Poultry

S. C. Barry, chief of agricultural marketing for Canada, told delegates to the Canadian Federation of Hatchery Associations' convention Wednesday, that the outlook for poultry products is quite bright.

In view of a lower output for the past two years and of storage holdings, which are about 50 per cent of the previous year, poultrymen can expect a good year.

New 40-hour week for express employees is proving a headache for poultrymen. It has affected shipments of day-old chicks and pouls especially during week ends when agents are not on duty.

LOCAL PROBLEM

D. McLean, representative of the Express Traffic Association, said some of the difficulties are local. He thought they could be worked out.

Association President R. J. Sanders told delegates it is evident that the potential chick output of hatcheries in Canada is in excess of what the market will absorb.

"While none of us like to see a reduction in our output, we should, for the time being at least, be prepared to see some of our equipment idle."

Oak Bay Socreds at their annual meeting Wednesday passed a resolution asking that the B.C. Social Credit League headquarters be transferred to and established in Victoria.

the B.C. Social Credit League stating that it was not possible to fit a card of any member until there has been a meeting of the complete board of directors.

The letter referred to the suspension by the Oak Bay group of W. A. Scott and Louis Horner.

REQUEST REFUSED

Mr. Scott asked that the letter be read to the meeting but the request was refused by C. Rice-Jones, chairman.

Mr. Scott said he was 100 per cent behind the Social Credit principles. "I consider Social Credit principles are the only crusade of hope for the whole world," he said.

Winter Heathers Enhance Gardens

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

No garden need lack color in the depth of winter where a selection of the winter-flowering heathers has been planted. These shrubs, erica carnea and its varieties, are native to Southern Europe and are perfectly at home on Vancouver Island, and require only an open, sunny position, good drainage, and ordinary garden loam.

Whether lime is present in the soil or not is immaterial. King George, which makes a very compact and dwarf bush, For the most part, these especially well-suited for rock heathers produce short, low garden work, and with flowers growing branches, with smooth of deep pink.

PINK BLOSSOMS
Mrs. Doncaster bears her clear pink blossoms in large clusters during the month of January. Ruby glow, crimson paling to pink; Thomas Kingscote, pale pink; and Atropurpurea, dark crimson, till out the procession of bloom in February, March, and April.

Even the smallest garden can find room for one or more of these winter-flowering heaths. The only attention they need is a dressing of coarse sand in late fall, to keep their feet dry through the winter, and a light cutting back in June. June is also the best month to take cuttings.

DELIGHTFUL PLANTS
These delightful plants will make really colorful splashes in the garden, planted either singly or in clusters. They are ideal for the rock garden, for flanking steps or paths, and for planting in mixed borders or as a ground cover among higher-growing shrubs and rose bushes.

Erica carnea and its varieties need no mollycoddling, and, unlike the rest of the erica family, they will tolerate a little lime, and do not insist upon peat or a lime-free soil. Even when out of flower, during the summer, they make evergreen cushions which are most attractive in their wealth of shades from the darker, older stems and leaves to the paler, young shoots.

FLES-COLORED

The typical kind has flesh-colored flowers, but praecox rubra is a very deep pink, with winter beauty a trifle deeper still. Cecilia N. Beale has white flowers on erect stems, and C. J. Backhouse is a delightful creamy shade. The best white, to my mind, is springwood white, which has curious brown anthers emerging from the centre of each flower.

Probably the best known of the erica carnea varieties is

PRESENTED SEPARATELY
Major Muir drew attention to the three outstanding new features, the dog show, the poultry show and the attraction, the international photographic exhibit of world's finest prints.

"I understand," said the mayor, "there are more exhibits in this most important event than at either the PNE or the CNE." The city has prepared for presentation a silver medal of honor for the winner.

KELLOGG'S

When you open a package of Kellogg's Corn Flakes you taste a hint of a cereal ringed in that taste. These golden flakes are as fresh from the plant as ours.

This freshness is a good reason why many of us like to eat Kellogg's Corn Flakes for breakfast. Is there a taste in your kitchen now or should you see your grocer today?

John Dunbar to Visit Parents, Continue Studies

Popular Singer Going to Aberdeen

John Dunbar, popular baritry, Mr. Dunbar plans to study tone, who has won the hearts under Roy Henderson, who was of Victorians, during his three, one of the finest artists to stay in the city, will leave Britain and is now acclaimed next month to visit his parents one of Britain's leading tutors in Aberdeen, Scotland.

Mr. Dunbar's wife, Joan, will accompany him.

While he is in the Old Coun-

STUDIED RECORDING

The reason Mr. Dunbar hopes to study under Mr. Henderson is that when he (Dunbar) sang on "The Singing Stars of Tomorrow" contest in Toronto, he studied Mr. Henderson's recording of an operatic aria.

er of the Oak Bay Beach Hotel where Mr. Dunbar is assistant manager, will be in London on his way to the International Hotel Conference at Stuttgart, Germany. She hopes to meet Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar, Miss Bryant and Miss Marion Gibbs, daughter of Oak Bay MLA Archie Gibbs, who is in England on a piano scholarship.

PLAUDITS WON

During his five years in Canada, Mr. Dunbar and those in B.C., Mr. Dunbar has earned many plaudits.

Soon after his arrival in Victoria, he started instruction under voice teacher J. Roberto Wood and soon was in steady demand by clubs and groups as an entertainer.

In October, 1951, he auditioned for the Canadian Industries "Singing Stars of Tomorrow" show and quickly climbed to the top of the talent ladder.

Although he didn't win first place, he was in the finals and was awarded honorable mention medal for his work.

POPULARITY GROWS

Since that time he has become more and more popular in Victoria for his singing of Scottish ballads and operatic works.

It will be a real homecoming for Mr. Dunbar and the wet cross mat will be spread. All his singing successes have been in Canada. He last sang in Scotland when he was 14 before his voice changed. He was 21 when he arrived in Manitoba.

One of his last performances in Canada before his trip to Scotland will be a recital at Courtenay sponsored by the Business and Professional Women on October 2.

BROADCAST SET

The will broadcast over CBC early next month and will sing at the opening ceremonies of CJTV Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Friends and admirers of Mr. Dunbar will be pleased to hear that before he sails he will make recordings of "Road to the Isles" and "End of the Road." These will be sold at music stores.

Winnipeg had a population of about 1,600 when it was incorporated as a city in 1873.

Lumber Industry Set To Hold Safety Week

A week of supersafety consciousness in the province's forest industry will begin September 28.

A white flag bearing a green milk shingle will be raised over saw mills, shingle mills, plywood plants and logging camps. A time-loss accident will cause the flag to be lowered at the plant where the accident occurs.

CO-OPERATIVE EFFORT

The safety week is a co-operative effort among various associations in the forest industry, including the B.C. Lumber Manufacturers' Association, B.C. Loggers' Association, Ply. of capacity to the injured man wood Manufacturers' Associa. and the loss of an employee to company, reports said.

In 1951, with 16,000 men employed in sawmills, only five fatal accidents were recorded.

STARTED IN 1924

The BCLMA started its first safety division in 1924. There were about 4,000 men working in coastal sawmills at that time and one man was killed, on an average, each month.

In 1952, with 16,000 men employed in sawmills, only five fatal accidents were recorded.

The appeal court termed the charge "unusual" and ordered the new trial in light of some evidence given at the police court trial.

Cobra Killed in U.S.

PERCY WRIGHT DEMANDS WEST COAST ROAD ACTION

Dulles Plans Policy Talk

This dangerous-looking snake held on the end of a pole was even more dangerous than it looks before it was shot in a residential area of Springfield, Ohio. The snake is a cobra, capable of killing anyone within striking distance. Five cobras have been killed in the area and no one knows where they came from. —Central Press Canadian.

Voters' Rights Upheld

CAPETOWN (Reuters)—South Africa's Nationalist government failed to get parliamentary approval Wednesday for a bill providing for segregation of colored mixed blood voters on a separate electoral poll.

The measure, supported 122 to 78, was 15 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed.

Premier Daniel Malan told the joint session of parliament he will try "another course" if his proposal was beaten.

The bill was designed to validate an earlier measure thrown out of the courts. Passage would have meant elimination of Cape Province's colored voters from the common electoral roll.

Mental Home Fugitive Believed on Mainland

Royal Canadian Mounted Police authorities in Victoria are almost positive that the fugitive from the Wilkinson Road Mental Home has managed to reach the mainland.

RCMP officers here were told Wednesday that United States fishermen had found the cabin cruiser which was stolen from a cabin at Albert Head during the week end. It was found 10 or 12 miles west of Port Angeles.

Further evidence that the man, James Carroll Hall, 30, has fled the island was an accurate description given the Port Angeles sheriff's office Wednesday by a U.S. citizen who claims to have seen the man.

Police authorities throughout Washington have been alerted to be on the lookout for the man.

Hall escaped from the home Friday night by picking a lock on a dormitory door and squeezing past a mesh barrier. He has been linked with the theft of firearms and a cabin cruiser.

This handsome trophy is the famous Mann Cup, shown off by Jim McLeod, president of the Canadian Lacrosse Association. The solid gold cup, valued at $4,500, is emblematic of the Canadian (or world) championship. Shamrocks dropped off the pace last night by losing a second straight game to Peterborough, 10-7.

Pleasure Sail Ends in Death

Robertson was unable to swim the distance. Ironically, the mast of the sloop remained above water after the vessel sank and the men could have clung to it in safety. —(CP photo)

Small Vote Likely

Less than one-fifth of the ratepayers are expected to go to the polls today to vote on the $150,000 Home by-law.

Polls open in the City Market at 9 a.m. and close at last Friday to the 10,000 or so by King Norodom Sihanouk.

Ratepayers are eligible to vote on the issue. Three-fifths of the three associated states from votes must favor the by-law to Indo-China.

Furthermore, official French in Viet Nam:

Cambodia Seeking Aid, Independence

PHNOM PENH, Indo-China sources in Saigon said the AP—Cambodia wants independence plus military aid from France and the United States.

Pen Neuth says: "An independent Cambodia in the war against the Communists has reached agreement on the main issues, though nothing has yet been signed and further talks are necessary."

In a long statement Wednesday, he edged away from a talk of a peace agreement.

A nation of 4,000,000 headed by King Norodom Sihanouk.

Cambodia has suffered least of the three associated states from the Indo-China war. Most of the action centres in neighboring Rangoon and Saigon.

Furthermore, official French in Viet Nam:

The result will decide if the city can contribute $150,000 land sale revenue toward the cost of a 104-bed addition to the Victoria Nursing Home planned by the Victoria Nursing Home by-law.

The other two-thirds of the $450,000 required for the building has been pledged by the provincial and federal governments.

F. E. Winslow, chairman of the society's board of directors, said Tuesday he was confident the ratepayers would approve the by-law. He stressed the importance of the matter and urged Victoria property owners to vote.

The present building accommodates 41 patients, 31 of whom are bedridden. The new building would provide modern accommodation for 60 more.

The average patient-age is more than 80 years, he said.

The debate was opened following tradition by two Social Credit backbenchers, Percy Wright of Victoria and Ray Williston of Fort George. Normally the first two speakers in this debate would expound government policy, filling in details on the bare announcement of proposed legislation contained in the previous day's throne speech.

But Mr. Wright and Mr. Williston skirted gingerly around the most interesting and controversial legislation due for presentation, the new liquor act and the amendments to the Elections Act.

They were explicit only on such thoroughly hashed-out items as the government's proposed income tax on mining and logging, reductions in car licenses and the raised ceiling of tax-free meals. These holdovers from last session must by now be familiar to every British Columbian.

When they touched on liquor and the Elections Act, the backbenchers were vague and cautious.

They hadn't, of course, seen the bills they were discussing—the bills haven't been written yet. And apparently they had had little direction from the cabinet as to what government policy was to be.

SINGLE PARAGRAPH

Mr. Wright, for instance, in his single paragraph on the Elections Act, said it would be agreed that the province's alternative balloting experiment "has not been entirely successful." But he didn't say the system would be scrapped. He seemed to be expressing merely his own opinion.

Mr. Williston gave only a single paragraph to the coming liquor act, and he didn't give away any secrets. He said the government "has followed the recommendations of the Stevens commission" as closely as they appeared practical of implementation. "But that was no more than Premier Bennett has been saying for weeks."

When the speeches were over the opposition was still thirsting for information. Apparently it will have to stay that way until the bills are formally introduced in the House.

Also Cure For Circle Lists Needs of Own Bailiwick After Starting Speech Debate

Vancouver Island has played its "one-string fiddle" long enough, Percy Wright (SC-Victoria) Wednesday told the legislature. "If a West Coast road would give us harmony, then let's have it," he said.

Mr. Wright, who led off the Throne speech debate, took two hours after a discussion of government policy to detail a few of the problems of his own bailiwick.

He called for immediate consideration of a west coast road, asked the government to help the city cure traffic congestion at the Fountain Circle, asked for a capital city grant, urged government co-operation in improving the Gorge waterway and asked for provincial and federal aid for a future Point Ellice Bridge.

He suggested something might be done to allow city council to permit a tea garden in Beacon Hill Park and urged the provincial government to protest to federal government this year's change in the official date for celebration of Victoria Day.

GOOD NOT TO?

The new road would encourage tourists to spend an extra day or two on the Island, he thought. "Having traversed our one highway it is little wonder that the tourists decide to leave on the nearest ferry at Nanaimo, rather than return to Victoria."

The ultimate, he said, would be a belt road through the Alberni and down the west coast.

Mr. Wright said the proposed ban on ribbon development would help to keep traffic flowing smoothly on the new city outlet to the Island Highway.

This outlet, together with the new Patricia Bay road, had created a "very extensive problem" for the city at the Fountain Circle. He suggested the House knock off early some afternoon so the members could watch 5 o'clock traffic backed up by the roundabout. He asked the government to include in next spring's budget money to help Victoria eliminate the bottleneck, perhaps by a subway. Mr. Wright plugged for a sole fence post and poles.

Posts Offered With Holes

EAST ST. LOUIS (AP)—The new telephone directory here carries an advertisement announcing the Sutherland Lumber Co. has for sale "creosoted fence posts and holes."

Not so, an official of the firm explained Wednesday. It was a typographical error. The items featured by the firm are creosoted fence posts and poles.

'Seal' Always Wiggles Loose

Although he was born without hands or feet, this South Korean, Chung Wan Do, is said to have a finger in every illegal pie in Korea. Chung, who is known as "The Seal," because of the flipper-like stumps of arms and legs, directs a gang of thieves, smugglers and dope peddlers. Korean authorities don't bother with "The Seal" on the grounds that it would take a number of persons to look after him in jail.—(Central Press Canadian)

Two Great New Strips To Brighten Comics

Two great, new comic strips on this coast, where most of the comic strips here could easily occur. The Daily Colonist comic has adventures joining the Mann Cup, valued at $4,500, is emblematic of the Canadian (or world) championship. Shamrocks dropped off the pace last night by losing a second straight game to Peterborough, 10-7.

They are Marlin Keel, a strip with the sea for its background, blended with a liberal portion of mystery and a dash of romance; plus Big Ben Bolt, a strip that is a fast-moving story of a clean short time, but a living young man who is one already has a heavyweight fighter.

Both are Marlin Keel, both as an MARLIN KEEL.

Marlin Keel is a brand new outstanding comic feature and strip that appears for the first a superb sports story.

At this time this week, approximately 100 newspapers across sent to a further attempt to round out a well-balanced comic until the bills are formally introduced in the House.

It should have special appeal page in this newspaper.
